A Somewhat Romantic Marriage,

Several years since Miss Ella Elkins, formerly of Defiance, a relative of Mrs. Hugh Marcellus, went to Chill, South America as a missionary teacher. In America as a missionary teacher. In that country she formed the acquaintance of Miss Leech, from the United States, who was also a teacher, engaged in the same district with Miss Elkins. They became warm friends and Miss Leech frequently spoke of a brother, living in Charlevoix country Michigan, whom she prised highly. In her letters home Miss Leech also spoke in glowing terms of Miss Elkins. This sisterly confidence soon enlisted the attention of the Michigan gentleman and the Defiance lady in South America and patalance lady in South America and nato ral'y a correspondence cusued. Cupic got in his work and in due time marri-age was proposed and accepted. Bis-tance alone was in the way of a speedy consumation of the engagement, but, a Stilli-master of about fifteen thousand miles was no obstacle for Miss Elkins to overcome. She wrote her beloved Ja-son Leech that she would immediately start for home and that "two hearts that beat as one" would throb in Defiance. Accordingly she took passage on a vessel, bound around Cape Horn for Liverpool, and from thence she came to America and arrived in Defiance about three weeks ago, and last week her lover was safely ensoned in her loving arms. They were married last Thursday night at the residence of Wm. Marcellus, and a more happy couple never before started on life's increase.

Just what to do with the painting is a problem that now confronts the government. The Star has only one suggestion to make: Send it to Mr. Rutherford H. Haves, and if his modest Fremont home is not big enough to hold it, let him do with it as the Vicar of Wakefield did with his great family group—make a wall for his heunery of it and where it; and where the peaceful cochin-chinas roost and the prolific brahmas lay their eggs, there let the angry chiaro oscuro of the past fade into the soft monotone of Democratic supremacy.—N. The majority insided on a broader and more Democratic form of Government. The first were called Federalists, the latter Republicans or Democrats, though the terms are syn-onimous. The form of Government consumated was that of a Republic The term Democratic party is the sorte a misnomer. There can be no Democratic party in the United States, because the form of Government is Republican, and not Democratic. ### Doctoring Royal Patients.

It was a matter of wonder to many persons in Paris that Dr. Fauvel, the great French specialist in throat dis-eases, had not been summoned to attend the King of Spain at the commence-ment of his malady, especially as Dr. Fauvel had always attended Queen, Isabella and her children during their resinature. But such a proceeding was for-bidden by the strict titles of Spanish ctiquette, which prohibits one of the royal family of Spain from being at-tended by any physician who is not a Spaniard by birth.

At the time of the last illness of the young Queen Mercedes there resided in Madrid a German doctor who was espeing party. It sprang into existence seemingly spontaneously and died away as suddenly. A similar affair, but out infringement. A similar affair, but with a different denouement, took place a good many years ago in Russia. The late Czarina, the mother of the present Emperor of Russia, was, shortly after her marriage, attacked with a serious affection of the stomach. Up to that time no physician could approach the beside of one of his lady patients of the imperial family nearer than ten feet. The Empress grew worse and became alarmingly ill. The Emperor Alexander gave orders that a famous physician called Botkin, of whose skill in such cases he had heard, should at once be sent for. Botkin came, and, to the horror of his colleagues, he walked straight up to the beside of the Empress and took hold of her wrist to feel her pulse. He was instantly hurried from the room and was loudly remonstrated with on the impropriety of his conduct, being told that his Imperial patient was to be looked at from a distance, and that he must not approach her, much less touch her. Botkin listened in silence to all that the other doctors had to say, but when the report of the consultation was drawn up he refused to sign it. The drawn up he refused to sign it. The Emperor, who was exceedingly anxious respecting Botkin's opinion, sent at once for the report, and on a officing that the name of the new doctor did not appear in it he caused him to be summoned at once to his presence. "Your Majesty," quoth Botkin, frankly, "I can not pretend to treat a patient that I am not permitted to examine. The Empress is, I hearn, in a very critical situation. I think I can save her, but to do so I must be allowed to go to work in my own way." work in my own way."
